BUILD YOUR KNOWLEDGE, MAKE A DIFFERENCE
When Peli Galiti moved from Greece to Madison with her family, she was looking for meaningful ways to practice in her field of educational psychology. She took one of our forgiveness courses and found her path. Now a visiting scholar, she’s influenced thousands of teachers and students back in Greece to practice the life-altering act of forgiveness.

While planning a trip to Costa Rica with her husband, Susan White decided to brush up on her language skills by enrolling in our Spanish 1 class. Finding that her coursework allows her to more effectively help the students she tutors at a local literacy organization, she’s since completed seven more Spanish classes and has started on Chinese.

We know that you look for learning experiences that not only build your knowledge and skills but also allow you to give back and make the world a better place.

Maybe it’s a leadership class that helps you create a better work environment for your coworkers. Or a writing class that helps you craft the words to inspire others. Or maybe it’s a grief support class that helps you counsel clients who have suffered a major loss.

Paired with your resolve, our in-person and online classes can help you transform lives and communities in ways both big and small.

How will your continuing education make a difference? Let us help you find out.
COURSE HIGHLIGHTS

UW Certified Professional Coach Program

This program is designed for you to become well versed in the professional skills necessary to do anything from building a private coaching practice to establishing a coaching culture or program in an organization. This rich training program combines many disciplines: emotional intelligence, positive psychology, neuroscience of coaching, organizational development, and appreciative theory. Train with professional coaches and your own clients to master the eight competencies of professional coaching as defined by the International Coaching Federation.

Fall 2020-Spring 2021

- Over a 10-month period, students within the cohort participate in blended learning through face-to-face classes and video conferences.
- Fee: $10,990 includes instruction, course materials and some meals.
- All in-person classes meet from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the UW–Madison campus.
